Description

Where Algarve tradition meets the blue of the sea...

There are places where the Algarve maintains its true essence. Fuseta is one of them: a fishing village full of authenticity, where a strong Portuguese community prevails and keeps traditions alive throughout the year. Here, the sea is part of everyday life, fishing boats bring fresh fish, and life maintains a tranquil, genuinely Algarve rhythm.

It is in this setting that we find this house built before 1951, and recently renovated, preserving elements of traditional Algarve architecture. On the ground floor, the ceilings with traditional brick vaulting are one of the elements that makes this house especially distinctive, giving it charm and character, and has even been featured in television reports. This floor has a living room and bedroom, both with air conditioning, a bathroom and equipped kitchen, in an environment that invites you to enjoy a simple and comfortable lifestyle.

Access to the first floor is via an external staircase, in an organization that adds independence and versatility to the different spaces of the house. There you will find a suite with air conditioning, a laundry room, and a pleasant terrace with views over the village and sea, now converted into a glazed space with thermal and acoustic insulation. Bright and welcoming, this space offers multiple possibilities for use, serving as an office, living room, gymnasium, or leisure area, allowing you to enjoy the landscape year-round.

Fuseta is one of the most genuine fishing villages in the Algarve, where traditions remain alive and local life unfolds throughout the year. About 10 minutes' walk from the beach, this house benefits from a location that allows most of daily life to be conducted on foot, with supermarkets, health center, restaurants, and the traditional fish and vegetable market nearby. Among the fishing boats, the flavors of local gastronomy, and proximity to the Ria Formosa, Fuseta offers a tranquil and authentic lifestyle, without sacrificing essential amenities. Faro airport is about 30 minutes' drive away, making this location particularly convenient for both personal residence and holidays or investment.

For its character, location, and versatility, it is an excellent option for a holiday home, a seaside retreat, or an investment in local accommodation, a use that has already demonstrated positive results.

A house with history, in a village with soul, where the sea is always nearby.
